Clinical Track Scholarly Contribution

Clinician-Individualized Portfolio: an opportunity for the faculty member and chair/section/division chief to develop a pathway combining features of the multiple pathways noted above with clearly articulated goals and metrics.

I have developed my academic career as a full-spectrum family medicine physician, with a growing focus on health policy to drive better care for patients living with serious illness through end-of-life. I established the University of Michigan Palliative Medicine Program in 2005, and continue to direct its clinical programs which include now 40+ board-certified hospice and palliative medicine faculty (among the largest in the country). I have taught extensively from institutional to international venues in numerous topic related to family medicine and serious illness care, and served extensively on appointed and elected bodies from the institutional to national levels. My scholarly work has grown to focus on value-based payment for serious illness care, for which I have received mid-career development funding and numerous invitations to speak, participate and lead national initiatives including developing an alternative payment model for community-based palliative care that has been recommended for testing by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS).
