Clinical Track Scholarly Contribution

My scholarly portfolio is best viewed through the lens of an "individual pathway" as my leadership and administrative roles focus largely in educational realms. As a clinical track faculty member I have viewed my scholarly activity as first and foremost being grounded in clinical excellence and having the highest level of expectation of my clinical education for our learners. I have extended my leadership and scholarship, through an active, invited expertise in medical education consultation and have been actively involved in our institution's curriculum transformation, having led the development of our medical school's scholarly concentration and coaching programs as well as helping develop our learning community. In my role as Associate Chair for Educational Programs, I have the overall responsibility for all educational programs within the Department of Family Medicine which continues to be highly ranked in its medical school and graduate medical education programs. Institutionally I am currently focused on further advancing our learning community while taking a leadership role in medical education coaching which is the focus of recent academic work and a grant opportunity through the American Medical Association. I also remain an active mentor, sponsor and coach of faculty both in and outside my department.
